Casting announced for Twelfth Night in Stafford

Former Emmerdale and Happy Valley actress Natalie Anderson (pictured left) will take the role of Olivia in this year's 1950s-set Stafford Shakespeare production of Twelfth Night. Natalie, who recently met an untimely end in the hit Netflix drama Fool Me Once, will be joined in the show by Molly Windsor. Running at the town's Gatehouse Theatre from Friday 21 June to Sunday 7 July, Twelfth Night is the 32nd Stafford Shakespeare show. Last year's production of A Midsummer Night's Dream achieved a record audience for a drama at the Gatehouse, with more than 5,000 people attending... Funding secures future of region's historic buildings

West Midlands Combined Authority (WMCA), working in partnership with the Architectural Heritage Fund (AHF), has provided vital funding to help protect the long-term futures of four of the region's most historic buildings: 16th-century pub The Golden Lion in Birmingham's Cannon Hill Park; Matthew Boulton & James Watts' Soho Foundry in Smethwick; Walsall Imperial theatre & cinema; and Balsall Heath's Old Print Works. As well as financially supporting plans to restore the historic buildings and bring them back into use, the WMCA has set up a Heritage Taskforce as the first regional body to advise on how they can be protected and re-used for generations to come.

Birmingham Royal Ballet announces 2024/5 season

Birmingham Royal Ballet's (BRB) programme of shows for its 2024/25 season will include an autumn presentation of Sir Frederick Ashton's La Fille mal gardée. Other shows featuring in BRB's later-year line-up include Sir Peter Wright's much-loved version of The Nutcracker and the world premiere of Luna. A two-act ballet in six movements, Luna is the final production in the company's Birmingham Trilogy (the previous two being City Of A Thousand Trades and Black Sabbath The Ballet). Early 2025 will see BRB once again presenting one of its most popular works: Sir David Bintley's Cinderella. To check out the whole programme and book tickets, visit brb.org.uk

A DREAM COME TRUE

Shawna Hamic talks about playing fun and sassy
Ursula the Sea Witch in hit touring musical Unfortunate...

Musical parody Unfortunate tells the previously untold story of Ursula the Sea Witch - the underwater baddie in hit Disney movie The Little Mermaid. Described as a tell-all tale of sex, sorcery and suckers, the show is rated 16-plus and is currently touring the UK - stopping off at two Midlands theatres along the way. Shawna Hamic - best known from award-winning Netflix series Orange Is The New Black - plays Ursula. She recently spoke to What's On about starring as her favourite Disney villain...

Unfortunate is a theatre success story. First staged at Edinburgh Festival in 2019, the quirky musical has gone from strength to strength. When it toured five years ago, it played small-scale venues - including Birmingham Hippodrome's Patrick Studio - but now the production has been expanded and re-imagined as a full-scale musical.

Inspired by Disney's The Little Mermaid, Unfortunate: The Untold Story Of Ursula The Sea Witch puts Ursula in the driving seat, telling her saga - and it's a very different fairytale from the one people are used to!

The show stars actress Shawna Hamic as Ursula, performing alongside River Medway as Ariel. Probably best known to readers as prison guard 'Ginger' Copeland in the hit Netflix series Orange Is The New Black, Shawna couldn't resist the opportunity to play the sea witch.

"When I was first approached about it, I was really excited because Ursula has always been my favourite Disney villain," she says. "She's the bad guy, and who doesn't love the bad guy? But also, I loved the fact that she represented something that I was in real life - a big girl who was powerful and yet fun and sassy. While we think of villains as bad people, it didn't seem like she was that bad. Just to get a chance to portray my favourite villain is a dream come true."

By putting Ursula in the centre of the narrative, Unfortunate allows audiences to understand her past and her motivation.

"The story is told through her point of view - she's the narrator as well as the lead character. She speaks to the audience and wants to really show her side of the situation made famous by the Disney movie. She wants it to be what really happened from her perspective, not just seen through the eyes of the heroine that you know.

"So it's the things that happened to her and caused her to be the way she is, and why she reacted the way she did. What caused her to really step into herself as a magical being. It's a love story - she gets the tragedy that happens to lots of people in life, and it makes her more recognisable in everyday life. We are shaped by the situations that we live through - and that can be true for our favourite 'octowoman' as well.

"We like to cast people as the villain, to see them only one way, and now we get to see Ursula as fully formed. We see her as a kid, we see her as a teenager, we see her on the cusp of greatness, then we see her as everyone recognises her. It's very much like Wicked - that same exploration of why she is the way she is. When we know that, we can accept that she's not just the villain."

In encouraging audiences to see beyond their preconceptions of Ursula, Shawna hopes the show will also inspire them to think a bit more about other people - and themselves.

"As a person who is large, as a fat woman, I want to be seen as more than just the funny woman or the sidekick that's sassy. I feel the same about Ursula being a villain - she's the one-dimensional bad guy who everyone has to hate. I don't think anyone is fully good or fully bad; I feel like, in life, we each have different levels and extremes within us. Exploring Ursula's story specifically allows us to explore the stories of the people around us. It may give us an opportunity to see someone in a different light who we have cast as one-dimensional in our mind. While that seems deep for a panto-comedy-musical, I feel it's part of what we try and explore.

"I think Unfortunate is a show that also allows you to look at yourself and rejoice in who you are completely. We want you to leave celebrating who you are, knowing that you are perfect the way you are, even if society doesn't want you to believe that. The way you look, who you love, how you see the world - you are unique, and unique is important and should be celebrated."

Written by Robyn Grant and Daniel Foxx with music by Tim Gilvin, Unfortunate may be inspired by The Little Mermaid but it's no children's cartoon. The production carries an age recommendation of 16-plus - and there's an important reason for that, says Shawna.

"Ours is an adult show - there are adult themes and adult language. And it seems that however much we warn people, there are still people who bring their children to the show. So we have five and six-year-olds and seven-year-olds and 12-year-olds in the audience! I come out and use some pretty blue language right off, and then there are adult visuals and themes. So you might have to have some awkward conversations with your children that you didn't want to have yet, if you bring them to this show."

Shawna is no stranger to the stage, having been in US productions of Les Misérables, 1776, Kinky Boots and The Last Ship, but this is her first UK theatre tour.

"I've been to London many times because I would come with my best friend and see theatre in the West End. We would spend a week or two weeks, so I've explored all of the touristy things of London, but I've never had the chance to be in London for a length of time, let alone explore the rest of the UK. So it's a really exciting adventure that I'm on, and what a great way to do it - working here, rather than exploring it by myself!

"I'm excited about getting to see and meet the people in all of the different tour locations. I want to see what resonates with everyone in their own towns and what makes them proud to live where they live. I want to see places that I've read about for my whole life or seen on TV and film but never visited."

With a seven-month tour in the UK, there are a couple of home comforts Shawna admits to missing.

"This is going to seem so silly, but any time someone comes over, I ask them to bring some gum and also to buy a Sprite or a 7up from the airport. You guys have a sugar tax, so you use artificial sweeteners in your drinks, and I can't have them - they make me ill - so the weirdest thing is that I ask people to bring me soda from the US!"

Unfortunate shows at Birmingham Hippodrome from Thursday 11 to Saturday 13 April and at Wolverhampton Grand Theatre from Thursday 11 to Sunday 14 July

GLASS ACT

A new production of Tennessee Williams' semi-autobiographical
The Glass Menagerie is this month visiting the Coventry Belgrade

Director Atri Banerjee's highly acclaimed production of Tennessee Williams' The Glass Menagerie visits the Coventry Belgrade this month. Actress Geraldine Somerville talks to What's On about returning to a play in which she first appeared some 35 years ago...

Actress Geraldine Somerville - best known from the Harry Potter movies, the film Gosford Park and as Robbie Coltrane's long-suffering sidekick DS Jane Penhaligon in hit television series Cracker - is delighted when I tell her she's made my job easier.

"Oh good! I'm glad I've helped somebody already today," she laughs, before I explain that her latest role gives me an instant angle for our chat. She's playing matriarch Amanda Wingfield in Tennessee Williams' classic domestic drama, The Glass Menagerie - the semi-autobiographical tale of a family on the verge of meltdown that kickstarted his playwrighting career. It's also the play that launched Geraldine's acting career, as she played the role of the daughter Laura in her first professional gig after leaving acting school in 1989.

To top it off, the latest version of the play, directed by Atri Banerjee, premiered at the Royal Exchange in Manchester, the same theatre where Geraldine made that debut 35 years ago. She giggles again when I suggest that her life has come full circle so she can now retire.

"I did think that, funnily enough!" she laughs. "It did cross my mind that maybe this is the end!"

If this was her final curtain call - and it's evidently not - then there'd be few better ways to bow out than returning to the incredible world that Tennessee Williams created, she admits.

"When I got that job back in 1989, I was cock-a-hoop because it was my first job after leaving drama school - wonderful theatre, wonderful part, wonderful play. But I probably didn't appreciate quite how wonderful the play is and what an amazing writer Tennessee Williams is. So I came back to it going 'Wow, oh my gawd!'"

The deep-south accent she adopts for those last words could almost be Amanda, the overbearing Southern Belle she plays in the show but who Geraldine admits she understands and appreciates so much more now that she herself is a mother (and not just to a certain kid magician!).

"My original take on Amanda was that she was stuck in the past, but then you see she's a woman who has survived on her own in America during the Depression, bringing up two children in a huge city where she's unable to work - because women couldn't - and with a daughter with a disability and no support. So she can't have been just a flighty little Southern Belle - she must have had some grit to survive that and to have got to where she is.

"I think the challenges with Amanda are that she's the mother of all mothers - in every respect - but because she's so vocal, and around a lot in the play, you don't want to be annoying and irritating; you've got to find a way into the character so that she's appealing in some way. That's the eternal challenge of playing this part. And you can play her in many different ways."

And as Geraldine points out, Amanda has rather a lot to say for herself...

"Yes, yes, yes! Laura's a joy to play because she does so much observation; she's just quietly there, soaking it all in. Amanda is the engine in a way; she drives the energy and the pace of the play, and that's quite a responsibility. And oh my God, all those flipping lines!"

Like Shakespeare, Tennessee Williams' beautifully written work isn't the sort of script you can adlib your way through when the brain freezes, Geraldine admits.

"He was a poet and his dialogue is so poetic. There's so much of a rhythm and a rhyme to it, so you really do need to get it right. You can't just generalise your way through or give an appropriation - not that I would, being the very professional actress that I am! That said, I have been known to come out with some gobbledeygook now and again, which is funny because it throws the rhythm out of balance."

Despite the challenge of such a wordy script, Geraldine had no hesitation in saying yes when offered the chance to reprise the role that she first played when the new production debuted in 2022.

"There aren't many acting roles in my age group, particularly in great classic plays like this, so it's a great opportunity. I couldn't say no!"

Better yet, Atri Banerjee's production (and Geraldine's performance) earned rave reviews, not least for offering an innovative new take on the original text - something the actress herself says was apparent from the off.

"I think what was - and is - really joyous about the production, and the design and the way Atri directs, is that it has a very dreamlike quality, because it's a play of memory, and you can interpret that in so many different ways."

The staging is "quite stark and pared back, almost ethereal" according to Geraldine, who admits the lack of props meant the actors - as well as their characters - were effectively "floating around in the ether of [narrator] Tom's memory".

"That was really interesting and different and fresh and new, but it had its challenges, I have to be honest.

"When I did the production back in 1989, we had props and it looked quite authentically 1937 - which is when it's set - but we don't have any of that, so it's challenging. As an actor you have to really use the text to tell the story - I mean really, really use it - because it isn't visually going to be delivered to the audience. You're trying to contextualise time and place, because they are very important in order to have an understanding of the characters."

The challenge is clearly something she's relishing though - not least because the new production is much more physical, leaning heavily on movement and symbolism to tell the story.

"It was a new territory for me as an actor. I haven't done plays for a long time because I've been busy with my children, so yes, it was really interesting, and I'm very interested in that kind of work - I like physical stuff.

"It's a more abstract - or expressionistic, maybe that's the word - version of the play, which I hope connects with the audience."

One thing that definitely has connected with an audience - or at least the BAFTA-voting one - is Gorka, a short movie Geraldine recently made alongside David Baddiel. The film was nominated for Best British Short Film at the 2024 BAFTA Film Awards, which were due to take place a few days after we spoke. Had she got her gladrags ready?

"Don't even get me started! I've just rustled up something of my own. The whole thing is crazy."

'Rustled up'? What, so you made it?

"No, no, no! Just something I had at home - shall we call it 'vintage'? I do many other things, but sewing definitely isn't one of them!"

Classical music from across the region...

Ex Cathedra: Good Friday St John Passion

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Fri 29 March

A favourite at Eastertime, Bach's St John Passion - a retelling of Christ's betrayal and death - continues to be one of classical music's most profound experiences. Performed by Ex Cathedra under the direction of founder & conductor Jeffrey Skidmore, the work is 300 years old in 2024. To mark the occasion, the performance will incorporate chorale preludes, motets, congregational hymns and readings, the intention being to offer 'a richer experience of the Good Friday service as Bach knew it'.

Ensemble Hesperii

St Alkmunds Church, Shrewsbury, Fri 15 March

Talented musicmakers Ensemble Hesperii here bring a celebration of 18th-century London to 21st-century Shrewsbury! Performing a mixed programme of Baroque music, the quartet present a concert which captures the spirit of a very special time in the capital's classical music history; a time when London was the musical hub of Europe, attracting not only a multitude of French and Italian musicians but also the great George Frideric Handel himself, who directed the first performances of his operas and oratorios in London theatres.

China Shenzhen Symphony Orchestra

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Mon 11 March

Acclaimed British violinist Tamsin Waley-Cohen here joins forces with an orchestra that came into being in the early 1980s, as the fishing village in which it originated, Shenzhen, continued its transformation into China's third most populous city and a global technology hub.

The concert features music by Saint-Saëns, Chausson and Respighi, as well as excerpts from the score of Ang Lee's Oscar-winning martial-arts film, Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon. Daye Lin (pictured) conducts.

Halle Orchestra: Finnish Skies

Victoria Hall, Stoke-on-Trent, Fri 22 March

The Manchester-based Halle are admired around the world for their extensive orchestral repertoire.

This latest Victoria Hall appearance sees Kristiina Poska picking up the baton to conduct a concert featuring compositions by Mendelssohn, Harle and Sibelius. The soloist for the evening is acclaimed Cumbrian saxophonist Jess Gillam (pictured).

Wombourne & District Choral Society

Church of St John's in the Square, Wolverhampton, Sat 23 March

Presenting a varied repertoire of full-scale classical works, madrigals and part-songs, the well-established Wombourne & District Choral Society this month turn their attention to Bach's Mass in B Minor, a monumental work widely considered to be one of the greatest achievements in the history of music.

The concert's conductor is Edward Caine.

Birmingham Bach Choir

Lichfield Cathedral, Sat 9 March

One of the city's oldest and most distinguished musical groups, Birmingham Bach Choir here gets its collective teeth into St Matthew Passion.

"To my mind, it is the greatest work created by the human mind - no more, no less," says choir conductor Paul Spicer, in talking about Bach's much-loved masterpiece. "To be able to perform it in the stunning surroundings of Lichfield Cathedral, and with a superb choir, world-class soloists and orchestra, is one of the greatest privileges imaginable. Come and share this experience with us!"

LABOUR OF LOVE

The Old Joint Stock's theatre manager, James Edge, talks about bringing exciting new productions to the Birmingham pub venue...

Birmingham’s Old Joint Stock Theatre will bring a tale of family, friendship and the desire for freedom to the stage this spring in a brand-new production of The Mad Ones.

The musical, which opened off-Broadway in 2017 under the former title of The Unauthorized Autobiography Of Samantha Brown, centres on the character of 18-year-old Sam as she reaches a crossroads in her young life.

Sitting in her car, keys in hand, she is trying to decide whether to take the safe route and stay home, or start the engine, take off and reach for the unknown. She hears the voice of her best friend, Kelly, urging her to go, while her mother and boyfriend press her to stay... The story then moves forward from that scenario.

“There are a lot of flashbacks, and Kelly is there talking to Sam throughout the show,” explains producer and Old Joint Stock Theatre manager James Edge (pictured). “The basis of the story is Sam making a decision about whether she wants to stay with this overbearing mother and do what her mother wants her to do, or take a risk for the first time in her life, see what the future holds and drive off. It’s a really beautiful piece.”

James is always keen to bring new work to Birmingham audiences and feels The Mad Ones is an ideal production for his venue.

“A big thing when producing shows for the Old Joint Stock is that you’ve got a 70 to 80 capacity, so there are limitations. You can’t get massive bands in there; you can’t get huge casts. The Mad Ones is a cast of four, with two or three band members, and I thought it would be the perfect show for our space.

“You can relate to every character in the show: the person who wants to stay; the one who wants to take the risk; even the mother, because she was a young, free spirit once, but the way her life turned out wasn’t the way she wanted it to.

“There’s definitely something for everyone. If you’re a lover of musical theatre, if you’re a lover of intimate storytelling, this is the show to come and see. It’s simple and stripped-back, but it hits you in the heart. It’s an absolutely gorgeous piece - a really pure, beautiful story with great songs.”

James took over as theatre manager at the Old Joint Stock in February last year. A former actor, he also runs the theatre website West End Best Friend. And his experience on stage has helped him hunt out lesser-known productions to showcase.

“Before running theatres, I was an actor for eight years, mainly doing musical theatre. When training at drama school, you spend a lot of time looking for songs for your rep, so you get to know a lot of the less-well-known writers. You start following their journey and seeing the shows they make. I also hear about new shows because of West End Best Friend, and I always try to listen to new cast recordings when they come out.

“The Old Joint Stock has really forged a name for itself with high-quality fringe theatre, especially musical theatre. When I took over, we did a musical called I Love You, You’re Perfect, Now Change, and that went down really well, so I’ve been looking for the next right thing. I love the thought of producing shows that people haven’t really heard of yet, but which will become their next favourite show.”

James ran The Town & Gown Theatre in Cambridge before taking over the helm at the Old Joint Stock, back in his home city.

“When I was an actor, I performed in about four or five shows at the Old Joint Stock, and some of my favourite experiences were at this theatre. I think it’s a hidden gem. We’d just had Covid, it was slowly trying to build its audiences back up, and they were looking for a manager. I heard about that and thought, that’s the role for me.

“The Old Joint Stock has so much potential, and it’s such a gorgeous building. I have visions for its future. You look at the London pub theatres and what they can achieve, and we can do that here in Birmingham. We are a receiving house, but also we’ve just produced four in-house productions between August and December of last year. I’d love to get to the point where most of the year we are staging our own in-house productions of new work and unknown work.”

James has two colleagues on the team at the Old Joint Stock: theatre supervisors Liam Alexandru and Emily Lloyd.

“We are working rigorously to get the theatre on the map, get audiences through the door, and do bigger and bigger projects each time. We’re doing the musical First Date in August - it’s on Broadway, and I don’t think it’s had a live production here in the UK yet. We’re doing that for three weeks. And going forward, I’d love us to be doing productions for four weeks, then five weeks, and running for a few months at a time and maybe even in rep.

“We’ll also start looking for sister venues where we can take Old Joint Stock Theatre productions around the UK - I’d love to take The Mad Ones out on the road.”

Producing in-house shows is a lot of work for three people, but James believes the benefits pay off.

“With your big, standard theatres, you have a big team to do all the different tasks, but with fringe theatre you just don’t have that budget. You’re selling to small audiences due to capacity limitations, so you do it all.

“So when you take on producing a show, you do absolutely everything. You find the show, you sort out the licensing, you do the casting yourself, you get the director on board, you do marketing - you organise everything. Every single bit of prop, costume and set, you make, source, beg, steal or borrow yourself. It’s a real labour of love compared with a visiting show, but there is something very special about an in-house production.

“Fringe theatre is unique. When people come to fringe theatre and watch the show, there’s something about that smaller space. The audience energy dictates the production, and that’s the magic of fringe theatre. You find that as soon as people have been once or twice, they just keep coming back.”

AADAL

Newhampton Arts Centre, Wolverhampton,
Thurs 7 March

Typical Scandinavian melancholy and Americana-inspired soundscapes are magically merged in the music of Norwegian four-piece AADAL, who take their inspiration from artists including Brian Blade, Bill Frisell, Daniel Lanois, The War On Drugs and Bon Iver. The band visit Wolverhampton on the back of third album Voyager, released to great critical acclaim last spring.

Richard Shindell

The Hive, Shrewsbury, Sun 24 March

From living in a Zen Buddhist monastery, to busking on the streets of Paris (not to mention opening for the legendary Joan Baez), native New Yorker Richard Shindell has routinely embraced fascinating and extraordinary life experiences - a good many of which, it's fair to assume, have positively impacted his remarkably insightful songwriting.

Lighthearted ballads, adulterous love songs, and dirges and diatribes that skillfully skewer politics, prejudice, war and religion are all present and correct in his output, as are songs telling stories from a first-person perspective. Indeed, he's even written one from the point of view of a cow stuck in a barbed-wire fence!

The Hives

The Civic at The Halls Wolverhampton,
Sat 30 March

Iconic Swedish garage rockers The Hives visit Wolverhampton this month in support of The Death Of Randy Fitzsimmons, their first album in more than 11 years (although they have released some singles during the last decade).

For those not in the know, the 'Randy' of the title is a fictional and limelight-shunning sixth member of the band (in reality, it's a registered pseudonym for guitarist Niklas Almqvist). The story goes that Randy doubled as The Hives' manager and sole songwriter, and that it was his 'mysterious disappearance' which caused the fellas to be absent from the studio for so long.

It's all in good fun, of course - a fact which comes as no surprise when you're talking about The Hives; the band are well known and much loved for their lighthearted and goofy approach to their music. "We give so much energy, and then it kind of bounces right back," lead singer Howlin' Pelle Almqvist told Clash. "So on one hand your body gets tired, but your soul feels better and better. So it's not just tiring... it also gives you a lot of energy."

The Lottery Winners

The Sugarmill, Stoke-on-Trent, Fri 29 March

Indie pop quartet The Lottery Winners provide a melodramatic blend of momentous melodies and insightful lyrics. Citing inspiration from 'all the painfully miserable' groups - think The Smiths, The Cure and Joy Division - the band have released five albums to date, the latest being last year's chart-topping Anxiety Replacement Therapy.

Martha Tilston

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Fri 15 March

Although she's the daughter of Steve Tilston and has been compared vocally to an early Kate Bush - which is never a bad thing when you're trying to establish yourself as a sound to be listened to - there's no question that Martha Tilston's ongoing success has been based entirely on her own merits as a performer and musician.

The Cornwall-based singer-songwriter's concerts regularly sell out, and of late she's ventured into the world of movie-making, releasing first feature film The Tape back in 2021 (along with an accompanying soundtrack album)... She appears in Shrewsbury with long-time collaborators Matt Tweed and Matt Kelly.

The Coral

Lichfield Garrick, Staffs, Fri 29 March

Influential five-piece The Coral exploded onto the music scene in the early noughties with a self-titled debut album that brilliantly combined psychedelia with dub, disco groove with pop and ragtime with Egyptian reggae. Now, almost 22 years later, two of the band, singer James Skelly and keyboardist Nick Power, are touring The Making Of The Debut Album - a special show in celebration of that first storming release.

An intimate evening of award-winning music and cosy conversation awaits...

BEAUTIFUL BALLET

English Youth Ballet principal dancer Lindsey Fraser talks about the company and its production of The Sleeping Beauty...

Founded by Janet Lewis in 1998, English Youth Ballet offers young people who are interested in dance the opportunity to perform classical ballet alongside professional dancers and tutors. Ahead of the company's performances of The Sleeping Beauty at Stoke's Regent Theatre next month, What's On spoke to Lindsey Fraser, who will be taking to the stage in the title role...

Many a young person would love to be a ballet dancer, performing centre stage in extravagant costumes. For such children, the opportunities presented by English Youth Ballet are surely a dream come true.

EYB has recently celebrated its 25th anniversary. The organisation provides young dancers with the chance to perform classical ballet on stage at major regional theatres in the UK, and to be taught and mentored by professional dancers.

Lindsey Fraser, who performs as a principal dancer with the company, began her journey as a child with a passion for dance.

"I first started going to ballet when I was two-and-a-half years old," she recalls. "My mum started taking me to baby ballet, because I had too much energy at home - I was zooming around a lot! I've been in ballet ever since. I started doing professional training when I was 11 years old, at Tring Park School of Performing Arts. It was quite full-on but very good. We would start at half eight and finish at half six."

Lindsey will be appearing on stage in the lead role of Aurora - the Sleeping Beauty - at the Regent Theatre in Stoke-on-Trent next month.

"It's based on the fairytale, and the production that we do is very classical. All the children have their own parts. Aurora is a great role - it's quite challenging!

"The production sticks to the original tale pretty much. Aurora pricks her finger on the spindle and goes to sleep for 100 years; the prince comes along and wakes her up... It's a great one for the families to come and see."

Lindsey started dancing professionally when she was 19. Ballet has always been a big part of her life, and the art of dance has always fascinated and inspired her.

"I was two, so I don't really remember, but my mum says that Cats, the musical, was on TV. I pointed at it and said: 'I'd like to do that.' As I was growing up, I was inspired by one of the dancers at the Royal Ballet in London: Marianela Núñez. She's my biggest inspiration."

Although she's been a dancer for as long as she can remember, Lindsey has been able to pursue other interests - one of which provides quite a contrast to her day job.

'Alongside ballet, I've also done a Maths & Physics Bachelors degree with the Open University. I've loved maths since school, so eventually, when I hang up my pointe shoes, I'm looking to have a career in accountancy. We'll see what the future brings. It will be difficult to think of a career that doesn't involve ballet, but that's definitely another interest of mine."

After performing The Sleeping Beauty in Stoke, the company moves to Nottingham, where it will present a production of Giselle with a different group of young dancers.

"It's the first time I'm going to be performing Giselle with English Youth Ballet, so that's exciting. We also have Swan Lake - I think I'll probably be Black Swan again, which is quite challenging but a fabulous role. Each role is demanding in its own way. It's really great to have that variety; it keeps things exciting."

Anyone from age eight to 18 can apply to join the EYB company, as long as they have a little bit of ballet experience - applicants who have at least Grade 1 are encouraged. There's an audition day, which is an experience in itself, with auditions split into Juniors (ages eight to 11) and Seniors (ages 12 to 18).

According to Lindsey, Janet Lewis - the company's founder & director - maintains that the overall experience of performing is the most important thing.

"She is really strong on performance - that's the aim of the production. We do look at technique and offer help with that, but the main part of it is the performance. She wants children to enjoy it!"

Not only will the young dancers become part of a high-quality production, they will also be given the space to make friends and enhance their love of the art form.

"We adapt the choreography to them and their standard. We want them to learn something from the experience as well, but they're on stage doing the choreography, so we want them to look great."

Rehearsals take place during the month before each performance and are scheduled so that they don't interfere with school hours.

"We rehearse with the children for around 10 days, at weekends - unless it's during the summer holidays, when we might spend five days with them."

Each production's final performance takes place in a regional theatre which is large enough to accommodate the number of people on stage and the scale of the show. The chosen dancers will come from an 80 to 100-mile radius around the theatre.

"We have a lot of rehearsals and then one weekend of shows in each place. The principal dancers rehearse during the week, and then, at the weekend, we travel to wherever we're performing, to rehearse and teach the children. We get to know them and see how they improve and grow. In the end, we're on the stage dancing with them, which is really lovely - it all comes together."

Auditions for the performances in Stoke-on-Trent took place in January, but there are plenty more opportunities for young dancers to audition this year. Children based in the Midlands can apply to perform in Giselle at Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, with auditions taking place on Monday 17 June.

In the meantime, why not get along to EYB's performances of The Sleeping Beauty at the Regent Theatre next month... It's the perfect opportunity to see what's in store for any aspiring ballet dancers - and to enjoy the company's performance of a classic tale.

Sophie McCartney

Victoria Hall, Hanley, Stoke-on-Trent, Fri 15 March; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Thurs 18 April

Award-winning comedian Sophie McCartney has entered the perilous world of parenting and thinks it's high time she told her audience all about it. "Why did no one tell me what to really expect after I was expecting?" she questions. "Will my belly button ever go back to 'normal'? Why do you need a degree in collapsing travel cots? And do I have what it takes to stop my current cereal eaters from becoming future serial killers?"

These and many more questions will hopefully be answered in latest show Tired & Tested, during which Sophie makes her way through subjects including mating, birthing, body changes, school WhatsApp groups, overbearing nutjob love, and still not being able to handle her booze on a night out...

Jessica Fostekew

The Glee Club, Birmingham, Tues 19 March; Newhampton Arts Centre, Wolverhampton, Thurs 16 May

"I exist in real life but am also a comedian, actor and writer," says Jessica Fostekew. "Since 2008 I've been throwing this job around like you would a walnut in a sock."

Realising herself to be a feminist "the very first time somebody said: You're really funny for a woman", Jessica gets her comedy inspiration from her life, her family and, er, witchcraft - although reassuringly reveals that the latter source provides only around one per cent of her material!

"I'm not a comedian in order to abuse people or to get laid," Jessica wrote in the Huffington Post. "I want to make people laugh. I'm there to be judged on my jokes. I've had everything shouted at me, from "My tits are better than yours" to "When's the raffle?" but it's never been meant to hurt me."

Matt Chorley

Midlands Arts Centre, Birmingham, Wed 13 March

There can surely be no better time than a probable general election year for Times Radio presenter and Have I Got News For You regular Matt Chorley to hit the road with a brand-new touring show. This latest offering sees Matt draw on two decades of reporting from Westminster - and two centuries of history - to deliver 'a hilarious guide to winning and losing at the polls'. In the process, he'll be focus-grouping the audience and compiling his own manifesto - one that he firmly believes is guaranteed to get him the keys to No 10!

Tom Houghton

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Thurs 14 March

In an age where tradition and progress are wrestling against each other, what are the parts of ourselves that need shedding, and what is it worth holding on to?

That's the question which will be posed by Tom Houghton when he visits Coventry mid-month. Tom's star is very much in the ascendant right now, thanks to a break-out year that saw him become a social-media hit courtesy of multiple viral videos. He's also appeared in Netflix's The Circle, hosted Very British Problems: Live and the Bad Manors podcast, and pretty much looks set for a fantastic future on the UK comedy circuit.

Adam Kay

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Mon 25 March; Victoria Hall, Hanley, Stoke-on-Trent, Thurs 3 October

After watching an Adam Kay performance, Stephen Fry declared, "This made me very, very happy." Numerous sell-out years at the Edinburgh Fringe and tens of millions of YouTube hits later, former obstetrician and gynaecologist Adam is this month visiting the Midlands with brand-new offering Undoctored, a follow-on from previous smash-hit stage show This Is Going To Hurt.

Leigh Francis

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Fri 1 March;
Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Sun 31 March

Funnyman Leigh Francis - best known as comedy creation Keith Lemon - is bringing to life his various characters in a 'live' environment for the very first time. Leigh is promising an evening awash with hilarious sketches and bucketloads of audience interaction - not to mention, of course, close encounters with not only Keith Lemon but Bear & Avid Merrion, 'David Dickinson', 'Ant & Dec' and Myrtle.

Jo Caulfield

Number 8 Pershore, Fri 8 March; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Sat 9 March;
Festival Drayton Centre, Market Drayton, North Shropshire, Fri 19 April; Lichfield Garrick, Fri 17 May

"I always question where my comedy's coming from," says Jo Caulfield, who's appeared on much-loved TV shows Mock The Week and Have I Got News For You. "Is it coming from a good place and is it a worthwhile target? I'm rude, I swear and can be very harsh, but I'm not that crude. I tend not to do graphic sex stuff, because it doesn't make me laugh. I always say I don't do fluids, because I don't find that funny. I also think it's quite childish. I don't think people are shocked by that kind of humour anymore. When comics think that they're being shocking, I just want to say, 'We're not shocked; we're just bored and find it distasteful.'"

Ania Magliano

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry,
Fri 15 March

Describing herself as a triple threat (bisexual, Gen Z, bad at cooking), Ania Magliano is currently going down a storm on the UK comedy circuit. And not just with appreciative audiences either; critics have also been waxing lyrical about her, describing the Cambridge University graduate as everything from artfully accomplished to profound, modern, incisive and deadpan hilarious.

Her latest offering, I Can't Believe You've Done This - nominated for an award at the Edinburgh Fringe and featuring an imaginative blend of the frivolous and the serious - covers everything from bad haircuts and dating experiences, to breast-reduction surgery and trauma.

Iain Stirling

Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Sat 23 March;
The Alexandra, Birmingham, Sun 24 March

"To help convince my father that comedy is a real job," says Iain Stirling, "I've dressed up smart and gone along to numerous posh parties where I didn't win the following things: Bafta Best Children's Presenter 2011, Chortle Best Newcomer 2011, Loaded Lafta Rising Star 2011, and a good few more!" Iain's self-deprecating style of humour has proved hugely popular since he burst onto the scene in 2009, when he finished runner-up to Joe Lycett as Chortle Student Comedian Of The Year at the Edinburgh Fringe Festival. The ensuing years have seen him enjoy considerable success as a children's television presenter and, most famously, as the narrator on the hit TV show Love Island. Jokes include: "When Jesus went to heaven, was that not essentially 'moving back in with your parents'?"

Alasdair Beckett-King

The Old Rep, Birmingham, Wed 27 March;
Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Thurs 25 April

When, as a stand-up comedian, you find that no less a laughter merchant than Stewart Lee is hailing you a five-star example of 'clockwork comedy perfection', it's reasonable to assume that you must be doing plenty right. And Alasdair Beckett-King most definitely is. Lee's glowing recommendation is no stand-alone tribute, with critics and audience members alike routinely praising the self-described hedge-wizard and cat burglar...

Alasdair - who also describes himself as England's most Scottish-looking man - visits the Midlands this month and next with latest touring show Nevermore - an offering in which he's promising to unravel some of life's shallowest mysteries...

WICKED WITCHES

Hit musical Wicked reimagines the story of The Wizard Of Oz from the perspective of Elphaba (who becomes known as the Wicked Witch of the West) and Glinda, the Good Witch. Twenty years on from its first-ever staging, the show is once again touring the UK. What's On caught up with Laura Pick (Elphaba) and Sarah O'Connor (Glinda) to find out why the musical remains so Popular..

Wicked has become a huge hit around the world. What makes the story so special?

Laura: It means so much to so many people. I think no matter who you are, where you're from, or what your life experience is, there's something in this show for everyone. It's about this beautiful, strong friendship between two women - I think we as women can relate to it.

Sarah: Whoever goes to see it will find something different from their perspective. There's not just one 'lesson' or one storyline; you can pull from it what you want and what connects and resonates with you most, be it a love story, finding who you are, wanting to better yourself in a community, or becoming a better person. It's a well-rounded musical - it's great!

Have either of you played these characters before?

L: I have. I was stand-by Elphaba at the Apollo Victoria Theatre in London for two years, and then I took over the role for about six months in total. I said during our rehearsal process that I've been on a completely different journey with the story this time. It feels brand new again.

S: It's my first time! I'm loving it. It's quite a beast, but it's been very exciting with Laura having done it before. She knows it, and feels like a really strong anchor for me to play against, but she's also been really open to finding a new journey for Elphaba and Glinda together.

Have you enjoyed working together to build the characters' relationship?

L: The funny thing is, during the show, other than moments on stage, we don't see each other. We have to make the effort to pop into each other's rooms, or go for a coffee. The special thing about Elphaba and Glinda is that you can find ways to communicate just with a look. Sarah had cut her arm one day on a very sharp sequin - I noticed it. Within five seconds, we'd communicated just with our eyes: 'Are you okay?' 'Yeah, I'm okay, I know about it!'

S: ...While we were singing a duet! We've had many conversations with our eyes - it's hilarious. Laura will be in my life forever. It's an absolutely amazing connection that we've got, and we feel very lucky to be working with each other. We're having the best time, and we know we have each other.

L: It's been lovely seeing feedback from fans or reviews, where people are saying that the chemistry between us is so strong.

S: You can tell we're friends off stage as well.

L: That's what she thinks!

Getting hurt by a sequin might be the most showbiz injury of all time!

S: You're telling me! That was my wand... it's really dangerous stuff, you know!

For a lot of musical theatre performers, these roles are on their 'bucket list'. Was that the case for you?

S: Yes, and I think that comes with the weight of the role. It's so important to get it right and deliver it as best we can. We know how lucky we are - we work hard. You have to have talent, and you have to have a really good work ethic and audition... but there is an element of luck. I auditioned for Elphaba for years! It just wasn't sitting right. Then I found my inner comedy, and I thought 'Maybe I'm a Glinda,' and it made way more sense. When I met Laura, I thought 'You're the kind of person who needs to play Elphaba.' Her vocals are ridiculous!

L: I wouldn't even dream about playing Glinda! It's a completely different beast. We both understand how challenging each other's roles are. Sarah makes it sound so easy.

The show is full of amazing songs, but Defying Gravity (sung by Elphaba) and Popular (by Glinda) are huge. When preparing to sing, did you look back at iconic performances, or did you try to distance yourself?

L: I still do! I still spend time on YouTube...

S: I've watched a lot of both Elphaba and Glinda - every country, every language, every version - but you cannot use those for your own version. It wouldn't be your natural progression in the role. I've watched them all, but I didn't go anywhere near them when I was choosing what I wanted to do with Glinda.

L: There's a lot of previous Elphabas all over the world that add riffs, but if it doesn't benefit the storytelling, why would we be doing this beautiful riff on the word 'and'? You listen and think 'I like the way that they've phrased that, I like the way they've put that sentence together.' And don't get me wrong, I'm sure we've been listening to the soundtrack on repeat from age 13.

S: Yeah... I could sing all the parts.

L: I wonder whether we could put on a two-woman show?

S: I reckon we could.

Laura, can you tell us what it's like when you're actually defying gravity on stage?

L: Flying is great. I love it! It was definitely nerve-wracking the first few times, but now it's just part of my day. You mentioned Popular and Defying Gravity being two of the most iconic songs, and we're actually both on stage for the whole time during those, so we get to share that moment.

S: Well, while you're singing those notes, I don't think you're worrying about how high you are!

Sarah, do you see any of yourself in Glinda, or are you very different people?

S: There are little elements... I'm definitely a lot more like 'Act Two Glinda' than 'Act One Glinda'. I wasn't born with a silver spoon in my mouth, I don't just say things that I'm thinking, and I'm not going to climb up the ladder any way I can... I think I'm answering my own question here - no, we're not similar! I can be on the spot and witty sometimes, but generally no. In Act Two, she's a lot more grounded and grown-up, so I can connect with her there. She's probably the furthest I've ever been from a character - but that's why I love her. When I come out of the stage door, people don't even know it's me.

Are you excited about the new Wicked film, which is coming out in November?

L: We'd better be invited!

S: If we don't get a private screening, I'll be livid.

L: I want to be invited to the real deal - the premiere in London.

S: I would love if the whole touring production could rent a cinema for the day, and go together, and enjoy it as a team. That would be cool - and we can all dress up!

L: We could just go after work in our costumes! The film is going to be so different from the musical - I'm excited.

Wicked shows at Birmingham Hippodrome from Tuesday 5 March to Sunday 7 April

Wicked Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 5 March - Sunday 7 April

Offering evidence that you simply can't please all of the people all of the time, Wizard Of Oz spin-off Wicked had to dodge its fair share of slings and arrows when it opened in London in 2006 (three years after debuting in the US).

The proof of the pudding, however, is most definitely in the eating, and 18 years after its West End premiere, Wicked is still going strong. Based on novelist Gregory Maguire's revisionist exploration of Frank L Baum's famous tale, the show basically tells the story of The Wizard

Of Oz from the perspective of two sorcery students, one of whom will become Glinda The Good, the other the Wicked Witch of the West. If you've seen the show before, chances are you'll be eager to catch it again when it visits the Midlands this month. If, on the other hand, Oz is a land to which you've yet to travel, then follow the yellow brick road to the Birmingham Hippodrome box office just as fast as your ruby slippers will carry you...

Madagascar The Musical

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Thurs 14 - Sun 17 March; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Thurs 16 - Sun 19 May; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Thurs 30 May - Sun 2 June

The smell of the greasepaint and roar of the crowd has tempted the furry cast of Madagascar the movie to forsake New York's Central Park Zoo in favour of treading the boards on a UK theatre tour.

The blockbuster DreamWorks film comes to life at venues across the region over the next few months, with Alex the Lion, Marty the Zebra, Melman the Giraffe and Gloria the Hippo all present and correct in a show that producers promise will send your kids home positively wild (which may or may not be a good thing!). CBBC and Strictly Come Dancing favourite Karim Zeroual stars.

Peak Stuff

Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Thurs 21 & Fri 22 March

Award-winning theatre company ThickSkin here collaborate with up-and-coming playwright Billie Collins to contemplate the question: in an age of retail therapy, climate crisis and click & collect, how does our 'stuff' define us?

Presenting three fast-paced stories about consumer culture, Peak Stuff is one of the works chosen to be part of the Writers' Guild of Great Britain's New Play Commission Scheme. The initiative was created in response to the decline in new-play commissioning following the Covid-19 pandemic.

Ben And Imo

Swan Theatre, Stratford-upon-Avon, until Sat 6 April

Legendary composer Benjamin Britten's struggle to write an opera in time for the 1953 coronation of Queen Elizabeth II provides the subject matter for Ben And Imo.

Receiving its premiere in Stratford, the play focuses on the timely arrival in Britten's life of the inspirational Imogen Holst, the daughter of composer Gustav and an accomplished musician in her own right... Originally written by Mark Ravenhill for radio, the new production is directed by Erica Whyman.

Bonnie & Clyde

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 5 - Sat 9 March; Birmingham Hippodrome, Tues 3 - Sat 7 September

This award-winning musical tells the Great Depression-era story of Bonnie Parker and Clyde Barrow, two small-town nobodies destined to become one of America's most notorious couples.

The production stars Catherine Tyldesley - best known from her time in Coronation Street and on Strictly Come Dancing - as Clyde's sister-in-law, Blanche.

"If you want to go on a real emotional adrenaline high, this is the show for you," says Catherine. "I think you would come out having been on a real journey with the highs and lows of the characters. And you'll learn a lot; and you'll surprise yourself in terms of judgement of the characters as well."

The Haunting Of Blaine Manor

Albany Theatre, Coventry, Fri 29 & Sat 30 March; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Thurs 18 & Fri 19 July

When Doctor Roy Earle, a renowned American parapsychologist famous for discrediting hauntings and exposing fake mediums, accepts an invitation to attend a seance at 'the most haunted building in England' - the Blaine Manor of the title - he finds himself, along with his companions for the evening, temporarily cut off from the outside world by a raging storm. And as every lover of the ghost/horror genre very well knows, where there's a raging storm and a haunted house, there are also, inevitably, things that go bump in the night... An award-winning love letter to both the Golden Age of Hollywood and the era of Hammer Horror movies here in the UK, The Haunting Of Blaine Manor is described by its publicity as the new Woman In Black - only scarier. That's quite a claim to make, but then there are also plenty of theatre critics and audience members who would be in absolute agreement about its quality.

Minority Report

The Rep, Birmingham, Fri 22 March - Sat 6 April

Widely known thanks to the 2002 Tom Cruise film version, Philip K Dick's 1956 novella is here adapted for the stage.

Set in a near future, the story focuses on the character of Dame Julia Anderton, a neuroscientist who has created a programme which monitors people's thoughts and detains them before they commit a crime. But when Julia herself is accused of 'pre-murder', she becomes convinced that not everything is quite as it seems...

"We commissioned this project several years ago," says the show's producer, Simon Friend, "but with its prescient central theme of personal technological surveillance, it has only become more alarmingly relevant to the world in which we live, despite the original story having been written in 1956."

My Life With Oscar

Old Joint Stock Theatre, Birmingham, Wed 20 & Thurs 21 March

Described as a tragicomic, true-life Sunset Boulevard - and critically acclaimed at last summer's Edinburgh Festival - My Life With Oscar finds actor & filmmaker Nick Cohen re-living and attempting to exorcise his desperate Hollywood years. Starting life in a dysfunctional wannabe family in Croydon, Nick chases his dream of winning an Oscar all the way to Tinseltown, where a film-producer family friend promises to teach him the secrets of bagging an Academy Award. Needless to say, not everything goes entirely according to Nick's plan...

Boy Out The City

Belgrave Theatre, Coventry, Mon 25 - Thurs 28 March

Moving to the countryside during lockdown came at a price for Declan Bennett. When his boyfriend left on a six-month work placement abroad, Declan found himself with plenty of time on his hands; time in which to ruminate on his previous life experiences. And not everything that he recalled made for a comfortable memory...

Taking audiences on an often-turbulent journey through his earlier years - and in the process bringing them face-to-face with challenging issues such as toxic masculinity, homophobia and men's mental health - Boy Out The City is Coventry-reared Declan's debut play.

And Then There Were None

The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 5 - Sat 9 March

Lucy Bailey directs this new version of Agatha Christie's 1943 adaptation of her own novel - a book which the legendary author admitted had been her most difficult to write. The storyline follows the fortunes of a group of strangers who, having been lured to a solitary mansion off the coast of Devon, find that their eccentric millionaire host has mysteriously disappeared.

The plot then thickens in a truly shocking way when one of the 10 guests meets with an untimely demise...

The Mousetrap

Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Mon 25 - Sat 30 March; Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Mon 3 - Sat 8 June; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Tues 25 - Sat 29 June

Not only has everybody heard of Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap, everybody's seen the show as well - haven't they?... Okay, maybe not, but as the production recently celebrated its 70th consecutive year in the West End, it's fair to say its capacity to put bums on seats is absolutely beyond question. Not surprisingly the world's longest-running show, its touring version here makes a welcome return to the Midlands, with EastEnders' Todd Carty and Only Fools And Horses' Gwyneth Strong top-billing.

Farm Boy

For anybody who loved War Horse - whether as a book, a film, a stage production or all three - this new adaptation of Michael Morpurgo's compelling follow-up novel is surely a must-see work of theatre. Presented by Lichfield Garrick, the family-friendly production revisits War Horse's main characters of Albert and Joey the horse via the story of a teenager who regularly visits his grandfather on his farm in rural Devon... A moving account of the changing face of the English countryside, Farm Boy was written by Morpurgo as a response to the many post-War Horse enquiries he received from readers wanting to know what happened to Joey. Morpurgo has also stated that of all the books he's written, Farm Boy is his favourite... If ever there was a good reason to check out the stage version...

Waiting Room

Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Wed 6 March; Old Joint Stock Theatre, Fri 22 & Sat 23 March

Laughter may well be the best medicine, but it's definitely been in short supply for anybody needing to use a hospital accident & emergency department in recent times. Acutely aware of this, Thomas Levi, Rebecca Morris and Chris Stevenson - aka Elemental Theatre Company - have here set out to provide their audience with a serious dose of the chuckles, transporting them to the medical mayhem of an A&E waiting room that's positively awash with eccentric staff and peculiar patients. Sections of the show have been developed verbatim through interviews and discussions with junior doctors and paramedic staff, a strategy which has allowed Thomas, Rebecca and Chris to deep-dive into the day-to-day lives not only of NHS key workers but also the often-difficult patients they encounter.

Wanted

Midlands Arts Centre, Birmingham, Thurs 14 & Fri 15 March; The Albany Theatre, Coventry, Wed 27 March

Powerful drama presented with a smattering of humour and plenty of heart is the tried-and tested formula in which Gazebo

Theatre place their trust when producing new work for the stage. This currently touring production from the highly rated company explores the stories of some truly extraordinary women: Irena Sendler, who rescued more than 2,500 children from the Warsaw ghetto during the Nazi occupation; Olive Morris, a British Black Panther and avid activist for women and squatters' rights; Phoolan Devi, India's fearsome Bandit Queen and politician; and Dr James Barry, a woman very much ahead of her time. The play is directed by Tonia Daley-Campbell and features Alexia McIntosh, who was nominated for an Olivier Award for Six The Musical.

Ladies Down Under

New Vic Theatre, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Fri 8 - Sat 30 March

Amanda Whittington enjoyed such a big hit with her play Ladies Day that she decided to write a sequel - and this is it. When Hull-based fish-factory colleagues Pearl, Jan, Shelley and Linda hit the jackpot at Royal Ascot, they decide to head off for the adventure of a lifetime Down Under. But once they're there, it becomes blindingly obvious that each of them is on a very different journey...

The Hound Of The Baskervilles

Prince of Wales Theatre, Cannock, Sun 24 March

Sherlock Holmes is one of literature's most enduring characters, The Hound Of The Baskervilles his most famous adventure. Yet no matter how many actors don the deerstalker and solve the mystery of the moors-roaming mutt, audiences never seem to tire of the story, and it remains a hugely popular choice for both stage and screen adaptation... Former Dr Who star Colin Baker here takes on the role of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's legendary sleuth.

Self-Raising

Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Tues 12 & Wed 13 March

After a life spent championing stories by Deaf and disabled artists, Jenny Sealey - the award-winning artistic director of Graeae theatre company - takes to the stage to tell her own story, a 'blisteringly honest' account of growing up deaf in a family with secrets.

INTO THE FUTURE

David Haig's new play, Minority Report - adapted from Phillip K Dick's 1956 sci-fi thriller - promises audiences 'an electrifying ride into the future' when it opens at Birmingham Rep late this month. What's On recently caught up with the Yes, Prime Minister, Killing Eve and Thin Blue Line actor to find out more...

When actor & writer David Haig agreed to adapt Philip K Dick's classic 1956 sci-fi novella, The Minority Report, for the theatre, he knew it would be a challenge - but it was the demands of staging a futuristic story which made the project so compelling.

"Simon Friend, the producer, rang me up," recalls David. "He was a fan of Pressure, my last play, and said: 'How would it interest you writing a sci-fi thriller based on Minority Report?'"

"Immediately my response internally was, 'What? How can I do this, and is it me? Me, whose plays have been about the First World War and Second World War, and with conventional structures?'"

"Then I thought that was the very reason to do it. How incredibly exciting to go off-piste and just write exactly what came into my head on the basis of this short story written in the 1950s."

And he was given carte-blanc to go as off-piste as he chose.

"The Philip K Dick Estate have been incredibly generous and said that, as long as you use the title and the basic premise of PreCrime - ie, that you can anticipate murder and get criminals off the streets before they've even committed the crime - you have complete freedom to write exactly what you want. And I've taken them at their word!"

David is not the first person to adapt the novella - Steven Spielberg turned it into a 2002 blockbuster movie starring Tom Cruise. But the playwright has taken a very different approach and made a fundamental change: his lead character is female.

"I thought it would be really exciting to get as far away from the original story in that sense, but also from the film, which in fact I hadn't seen when I wrote the first draft of the adaptation. So it felt right to write an exciting part for a middle-aged woman in a sci-fi thriller. It's unlikely, it's unexpected, and that's what's interesting about it."

"The principle of the play is that the head of PreCrime, Julia Anderton, sees her own name on the list as the next pre-murderer - ie, it has been predicted that she will murder - and it's the last thing in the world that she, as head of the whole organisation, expects."

"Then the play is 80 minutes of real time from that moment. It's always through her point of view, and it's her run from potential incarceration and criminalisation. Will she kill? Won't she? Will she be proved innocent? Won't she?"

"Not only is it a sci-fi thriller, the play is an interesting portrait of a woman who has to change her mind on a very important premise. Yes, it's a sci-fi thriller, but also it's a conventional play with a story and a journey."

David's previous dramas include My Boy Jack, The Good Samaritan and the aforementioned Pressure - but adapting a futuristic tale set in 2050 is a very different prospect.

"The challenges of writing sci-fi for the stage are writing stage directions like 'the van chases the car at 40 miles an hour, the two collide, there is an explosion of metal and the car bursts into flames....'"

"That was the freedom that I adopted when I was writing it. You just write anything that comes into your head, and then the director, Max Webster, and the incredible design team that we've got say, 'That's possible, that's not possible, that's possible, that's not possible.' And so we work towards a solution in that way."

David has also found the notion of writing about a future world fascinating.

"When Blade Runner was filmed, which is also based on a Philip K Dick story, he turned down literally ten to 15 applications for screenplays before he agreed to one. And the one he agreed to was because they created the tone of his world right, and the tone of his world was some bits very dilapidated and old-fashioned, and some bits very modern and futuristic."

"You have to get a mixture, so that people feel comfortable in the world they're in but at the same time think: 'Wow, that's new, and that might already have happened. and that could be about to happen...'"

And the unnerving part of writing about a possible future is that some of it has already come true.

"The whole premise of predicting crime is very close to us. What has struck me is that each time I've done a new draft of this play, it's been because the whole obsession with, the fear of, the respect for artificial intelligence (AI) has raced forward as I've been writing it.

"I'd already written a draft before Covid, and by the time the lockdowns had finished, AI was rattling forward and I was already out of date, so I've had to keep up with those developments. This prediction of how the brain behaves and in what ways it pre-empts stuff and predicts stuff is already there. It doesn't actually feel so outlandish."

David is also well known as an actor, playing Inspector Grim in television's The Thin Blue Line and appearing in series as diverse as Downton Abbey, Killing Eve and the 2013 re-make of Yes, Prime Minister. He's no stranger to acting in films either, having appeared in hit movies Four Weddings And A Funeral and Two Weeks Notice. He grew up in Rugby and knows Birmingham well, having worked at The Rep more than 40 years ago.

"My wife Julia was born in Coventry, and we met in Birmingham. She was working, at the time, for a very good community theatre company called Second City, and then we went on to work together at Birmingham Rep. "This was in the era of Clive Perry, back in the late 1970s and early 80s, and I loved my time there."

"I've been back very regularly over the years and have a loyalty to the city. I'm very excited that the show is coming to The Rep, and I'm looking forward to seeing how it fits into that environment."

And David encourages everyone, not just sci-fi fans, to see Minority Report.

"People who have an open mind to the whole concept of how much our society is watched and monitored - and how much our thoughts are probed, and how much science is racing ahead of any safety - as well as people who just want a straight adventure story, will be excited by it."

Theatre for younger audiences

Zog And The Flying Doctors

Worcester Swan Theatre, Tues 19 - Thurs 21 March; Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Tues 26 - Thurs 28 March; Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Fri 14 - Sun 16 June

Freckle Productions' adaptation of Julia Donaldson & Axel Scheffler's much-loved book finds everybody's favourite dragon (that's Zog!) providing an air-ambulance service with the assistance of his 'flying doctor' crew, Princess Pearl and Sir Gadabout. But Pearl's uncle, the king, doesn't believe that princesses should be doctors, and before too long Pearl finds herself locked up in the castle and forced to wear a crown and a 'silly frilly dress'. Needless to say, help is soon at hand...

Claytime

Midlands Arts Centre, Birmingham, Sat 16 & Sun 17 March; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Thurs 28 & Fri 29 March

"Come to a place where the earth's natural material meets with children's imaginations," say Indefinite Articles theatre company, in talking about currently touring production Claytime. "It's a world of fabulous forms, amazing animals and morphing monsters!"

Interactive play with clay is a guarantee in this lively show for children aged three to six, with the award-winning ensemble further advising "It's messy fun, so don't wear your party clothes!"

Jurassic Live

Theatre Severn, Shrewsbury, Sun 24 - Tues 26 March; The Halls, Wolverhampton, Fri 24 & Sun 26 May

Jurassic Live's promoters are hailing this prehistoric extravaganza 'a roarsome adventure' not to be missed. Featuring professional puppeteers and impressively realistic dinosaurs, the production follows a team of dino rangers as they search for a missing baby dinosaur... Highlights of the show include the UK's only flying Pterodactyl and the country's biggest Tyrannosaurus Rex.

Awful Auntie

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Thurs 28 - Sun 31 March; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Thurs 17 - Sat 19 October

Frights, fights and friendships are the order of the day in this lively adaptation of David Walliams' much-loved story. At the centre of the tale is a young girl named Stella. The sole heir to Saxby Hall, she finds herself in danger of losing both her inheritance and her life when she comes up against her thoroughly unpleasant Aunt Alberta...

Along Came A Magpie

Newhampton Arts Centre, Wolverhampton, Wed 27 March

Puppetry, plants, and pots aplenty feature in this intimate work of theatre for youngsters aged two to six. Telling the tale of a gardener who finds her potting shed turned upside-down by a visiting magpie, the show takes audiences on a playful and heart-warming journey as the pair set about navigating the intricacies of friendship...

Dear Zoo

Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Sat 2 & Sun 3 March; Royal Spa Centre, Leamington Spa, Thurs 14 & Fri 15 March; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Fri 29 & Sat 30 March; Birmingham Hippodrome, Thurs 11 - Tues 16 April; Lichfield Garrick, Sat 20 & Sun 21 April

First published in 1982, Rod Campbell's lift-the-flap book, Dear Zoo, has delighted generations of children and accumulated millions of sales worldwide.

This hugely popular stage version of the story features music, child-friendly puppets and lots of audience participation.

Dogs Don't Do Ballet

Brewhouse Arts Centre, Burton-upon-Trent, Sat 23 - Mon 25 March

Little Angel Theatre make a welcome return with a show about a dog named Biff who thinks he's a ballerina.

The production is based on the same-named book by Anna Kemp and brings together 'beautiful puppets, well-loved ballet music and dazzling comedy'.

Peppa Pig's Fun Day Out!

Crewe Lyceum Theatre, Wed 20 & Thurs 21 March; Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Sat 25 & Sun 26 May; The Alexandra, Birmingham, Wed 31 July & Thurs 1 August; Belgrade Theatre, Coventry, Wed 28 & Thurs 29 August; Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Wed 18 & Thurs 19 September; Palace Theatre, Redditch, Wed 25 & Thurs 26 September; Malvern Forum Theatre, Wed 16 & Thurs 17 October

If you've taken your little ones to any of the previous Peppa Pig stage shows - and enjoyed the experience of watching them having a fantastic time - you'll be in no doubt that this latest production is well worth catching.

The show sees Peppa, along with her family and friends, enjoying a fun-packed day at the zoo and the beach.

Parents are advised to prepare their children for all manner of cracking capers, including singing and dancing with colourful scarecrows, feeding penguins, building big sandcastles, and swimming in the sea! Looks like an oinktastic time is going to be had by all!

Buffy Revamped

Victoria Hall, Stoke-on-Trent, Sun 10 March;
The Alexandra, Birmingham, Tues 26 March

Calling to mind the work of ensembles such as the Reduced Shakespeare Company, Buffy Revamped is a fast-paced new production that wings its way through all 144 episodes of hit 1990s television series Buffy The Vampire Slayer. Not only that, but it does so in an admirably concise 70 minutes.

The one-man production is presented by Brendan Murphy, whose central character of Spike is a fella who, as you might imagine, knows a thing or several about the now-cult US TV show... Buffy Revamped scored a big hit in Edinburgh, so if you're a fan of the series yourself, a fun evening out is pretty much guaranteed.

I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre,
Tues 26 March

One-time Young Ones favourite Adrian Edmondson has called it "the most ridiculous, most surreal, most incomprehensibly funny show on any medium," while The Radio Times confidently described it as "indisputably the greatest radio comedy of all time."

Having garnered plenty more similarly effusive praise across its 52 years and 70-plus series, I'm Sorry I Haven't A Clue continues to strike chords with BBC Radio Four listeners throughout the country.

The comedy panel game has been touring to theatres since 2007 and here makes a welcome return to the Midlands region. This particular evening of inspired nonsense sees host Jack Dee joined by pianist Colin Sell and a 'star-studded' cast of as-yet-unannounced (at the time of writing) comedians.

The Great Baldini

Foxlowe Arts Centre, Leek, Staffs, Wed 6
March; Stafford Gatehouse Theatre, Sat 9
March

Those unfamiliar with The Great Baldini are advised to imagine an amalgamation of arch Bond villain Ernst Blofeld and legendary magician/comedian Tommy Cooper. The self-proclaimed - presumably with his tongue firmly in his cheek - 'emperor of illusion, prince of prestidigitation and maharajah of mystery' is stopping off in the region this month to present 'a cabaret of magical illusions'.

Bristol-based Baldini comes complete with a host of five-star reviews and is a firm family favourite, so be sure to check him out before he vanishes in a puff of smoke...

Jerry Sadowitz

Dudley Town Hall, Thurs 28 March;
Huntingdon Hall, Worcester, Sat 6 April

American-born Scottish comedian & magician Jerry Sadowitz comes with a big fat health warning; he is most definitely not for the fainthearted!

A man who's not averse to hurling his underwear at female members of the audience, Sadowitz is about as far away from political correctness as it's possible to get. On-stage antics have included stamping on a blow-up doll of Linda McCartney not long after she'd died, spitting in the face of a drunken heckler, and pouring scorn on Jimmy Savile just days after the DJ had passed away (although history does of course show that Jerry was singing from the correct hymn sheet regarding the Jim'll Fix It star).

The Bugle Live

Old Rep, Birmingham, Sun 10 March;
Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, Sat 16 March

Fans of long-running podcast The Bugle - it was launched in 2007 and has run for 600-plus episodes - here get the chance to sample its magic live on stage.

Presented by Andy Zaltzman - perhaps best known to BBC Radio Four listeners as the host of The News Quiz - the show sees co-hosts and guests delivering 'freshly hewn topical satire, as well as probable and certifiable lies and other assorted high-grade nonsense'.

Sasha Velour: The Big Reveal Live Show

Symphony Hall, Birmingham, Tues 12 March

The gender-fluid Sasha Velour - the season-nine winner of RuPaul's Drag Race back in 2017 - stops off in Birmingham in support of recently published book The Big Reveal: An Illustrated Manifesto Of Drag.

Offering an immersive evening of storytelling and live art, the show features 'iconic new performances' by Sasha and an appearance by a special guest star.

Dance previews from across the region

Sao Paulo Dance Company

Wolverhampton Grand Theatre, Fri 15 & Sat 16 March

It's 'Brazilian sunshine time' in Wolverhampton mid-month, courtesy of a triple bill from first-time visitors São Paulo Dance Company. The talented ensemble have produced more than 100 classical and contemporary works since forming 16 years ago, in the process touring to nearly 20 countries and performing in front of 900,000-plus people.

"São Paulo is a dance company with a very special Brazilian accent," explains Artistic Director Inês Bogéa. "We have the passion for dance, we have the energy of Brazil, and we love to share that with audiences around the world.

"In the programme that we're presenting here, the choreographers are trying to reflect on stage what we are all feeling in this moment of our lives. They create a unique world through the movements, the connections with the music, and the images that they evoke..."

"We are open to sharing ideas and sensations, and we aim to meet people and understand different ways of looking at our world and our time. So we are looking forward to showing audiences a little bit of our culture, and through the dance we will all feel the energy of Brazil."

Diversity

Regent Theatre, Stoke-on-Trent, Wed 20 & Thurs 21 March; The Halls Wolverhampton, Sat 6 April

With numerous sell-out tours under their belt, it's fair to say Diversity have made the most of their Susan Boyle-beating success on Britain's Got Talent 15 years ago.

The London-based street-dance crew are this month and next visiting the Midlands region with latest offering Supernova. Extremely well received on its mammoth 66-date tour across 40 towns and cities, the production differs somewhat from previous Diversity shows in the sense that it follows a storyline.

The group is using the tour to support anti-poverty charity the Trussell Trust, with audience members being invited to bring along food donations to the shows.

A Midsummer Night's Dream

Albany Theatre, Coventry, Thurs 21 March

Having earned an enviable reputation for presenting innovative and magical productions, it's reasonable to assume that Ballet Theatre UK will once again be striking all the right notes with this currently touring dance version of the classic Shakespeare comedy... Expect impressive choreography - set to the iconic Mendelssohn score - and a wardrobe's worth of beautiful costumes.

40/40 By Katherina Radeva

The Patrick Studio, Birmingham Hippodrome, Fri 8 & Sat 9 March

Award-winning performance maker and visual artist Katherina Radeva describes her critically acclaimed 40/40 show as an inspiring, insightful and moving celebration of her 40 years as a woman, a migrant and an artist... The production takes its audience on a journey through Kat's life, from long-ago days spent dancing at her parents' student parties, through her experience of being body-shamed as a teenage rhythm gymnast, to the present day, when she defines herself as a creative who refuses to be categorised.

THE HUMAN HEART

A brand-new choreographed production gives voice to an unspoken and overlooked love story

Two internationally renowned kathak choreographers and dancers will come together at Birmingham Hippodrome next month to present a brand-new work.

Birmingham-born Aakash Odedra and New Delhi-based Aditi Mangaldas have joined forces to create and perform Mehek, a work which explores the power of love, memory, desire, attraction and resilience.

The show focuses on the often taboo subject of love between an older woman and a younger man. In doing so - explains the project's dramaturg, Karthika Nair - it takes a look at society's expectations in terms of an 'acceptable' relationship, and also celebrates the courage of those who defy societal norms: "The story explores both the immense strength that one can derive from love and also the challenges that are faced by people who are willing and brave enough to not abide by certain societal preconceptions about who can love and who can be loved.

"We are so used to older men courting, marrying and raising families with younger women, including some very famous men. I think history is ripe with examples. Aditi has been exploring these questions about the double standards we often find in society's expectations of men as opposed to those that it has for women.

"She mentions that women get slotted very easily into roles. So first, you're the daughter, then you're the suitable lover, then you become the wife, and then you become the mother. The idea that a woman could be multiple things is something that we grapple about.

"Love is not an exception in terms of how it's viewed in society. It's maybe heightened because it comes with an added explosive element, which is feminine desire, which is what all societies try to police. And the idea that an independent woman who is older, and therefore has seen the world and is not necessarily cowed by any kind of influence, should express desire is probably a very frightening thing for many people."

The title Mehek is derived from the Hindi word for fragrance. The team have been researching ideas of memory and love through Western and South Asian literature and also through the importance of our senses.

"Some of my other early tasks as a dramaturg were to dissect the notion of love and see what the intersections of memory were," says Karthika. "So, for instance, in the first workshops in Delhi, we worked round the idea of objects or sounds associated with love. What would be the fragrance that one associates with love or a loved one? What would be a memory that one associates with love? And what would be the places associated with love?"

"These questions were to stimulate the senses and see what the responses would be in movement terms. For instance, how do you describe the fragrance of love in just movement terms?"

"It's not a linear narrative necessarily, but there is a story. And with any dance piece, anyone should be able to access it without knowing the back story or having to read the programme notes. So I think my job has been to ensure that, even if it's abstract, the emotional connections are comprehensible to the audience. The narrative is always true to itself, and my role is just to make sure that all of the ingredients which go into making the piece are coherent."

As part of the research and development of the show, the team worked with Leicester-based creative dance company Moving Together in Mehek Live, a community-engagement project during which they listened to the experiences and views of older people. Workshops exploring dance, music, memory and story-sharing have so far involved more than 450 people in venues including care homes and community centres.

"It was humbling and moving, because we got to explore so many questions with them. One of the questions I asked was: 'When love ends, what remains? What do you give, and what do you take back?' And I remember one woman saying that even when love ends, it never ends.

"I think they felt heard, and that is wonderful because we often don't have time for older people, especially for their memories. These workshops gave a platform for memories. They could bring their memories and know they are treasured.

"Not every project comes with these echoes. For me, it was one of the big takeaways. It was wonderful that the company facilitated those weeks and continues to do so. They are on at it even now, so there are all these homes and community centres where Mehek is still alive."

Karthika believes the production and the themes it explores are accessible to people of all backgrounds.

"I don't think one needs cultural shorthands to unpack the story; it's really identifiable. There is a certain amount of kathak vocabulary, but much of it is also universal. When you hold a hand in front of your face, it symbolises a mirror, and that's very clearly so in kathak, but I think that becomes very clear to anyone who is watching. And Aakash and Aditi are extraordinary performers. They perform to people all over the world who have never even heard the word kathak or know anything about the code and language of South Asian dance."

Born in Kerala and now living in France, Karthika is a writer, academic and dance enabler who has worked with companies across the globe. Co-founder (with Sidi Larbi Cherkaoui) of Antwerp-based dance company Eastman, she has also worked with numerous internationally renowned dancers and choreographers, including Akram Khan, Carlos Pons Guerra and Shobana Jeyasingh. Mehek, she says, is a rare chance for audiences to see two of the international stars of South Asian dance performing together.

"This is a duet by two extraordinary performers who are both very conversant in different techniques. Aditi has been dancing for close to 50 years - since she was a child - but in the last decade or so, her work has also encompassed the contemporary. Aakash has always inhabited these various spheres. So what audiences can expect is performers who are hypnotic, powerful dancers.

"I guess one thing we would like through this piece is to gently remind ourselves that we needn't be judgmental; that we can just let ourselves be happy that others are happy; that who you love is a personal thing. And also that we should be so lucky, whatever our age, to find someone to love us or to find someone to love. Life is short; it's horribly unpredictable. Love, for all the messiness that it brings, is also salvation."

Aakash Odedra Company and Aditi Mangaldas Dance Company present Mehek at Birmingham Hippodrome on Tuesday 9 April

Film highlights in March...

Dune: Part II CERT tbc (166 mins)

Starring Timothée Chalamet, Zendaya, Florence Pugh, Austin Butler, Rebecca Ferguson, Josh Brolin
Directed by Denis Villeneuve

One of the most high-profile sci-fi movies of the mid-1980s - and directed by David Lynch - Dune actually began life as a novel, written by Frank Herbert back in the 1960s...

This latest cinematic incarnation - the second film of a two-part adaptation - explores the mythic journey of Paul Atreides, the heir to a noble house, as he follows a path of revenge against the conspirators who destroyed his family.

Facing a choice between the love of his life and the fate of the known universe, he endeavours to prevent a terrible future which only he can foresee...

Released Fri 1 March

Lisa Frankenstein

CERT 15 (101 mins)

Starring Kathryn Newton, Liza Soberano, Jenna Davis, Trina LaFargue, Paola Adino, Joshua Montes Directed by Zelda Williams

Described by its publicity as a coming-of-age love story, Lisa Frankenstein follows the adventures of a misunderstood teenager and her handsome high-school crush - who just happens to be a corpse. After a set of playfully horrific circumstances bring him back to life, the pair embark on a murderous journey to find love and happiness - and a few missing body parts along the way...

Robin Williams' daughter, Zelda, is the woman at the helm of a film that aims to pay homage to the hugely popular horror comedies of the 1980s. Sadly, its inability to merge the two genres with any real sense of focus or conviction has seen it dig its own grave with many critics.

Released Fri 1 March

Imaginary CERT tbc (104 mins)

Are imaginary friends really just creations of a child's mind, or is something far more sinister at play?

That's the question being asked in this original horror from Blumhouse, the production company behind Five Nights At Freddy's and M3GAN.

When Jessica moves back into her childhood home with her family, her youngest stepdaughter, Alice, develops a disconcerting attachment to a stuffed toy bear named Chauncey which she finds in the basement. As Alice's behaviour becomes increasingly concerning, Jessica decides to intervene - only to realise that there's way more to Chauncey than meets the eye...

Released Fri 8 March

Kung Fu Panda 4 CERT PG (94 mins)

With the voices of Jack Black, Awkwafina, Viola Davis, Dustin Hoffman, James Hone, Bryan Cranston

Directed by Mike Mitchell and Stephanie Stine

Launched in 2008 with a film that went on to earn an Academy Award nomination, the Kung Fu Panda franchise is big, big business, having so far made more than $1.8billion at the global box office.

Jack Black once again voices the character of Po Ping - the Kung Fu Panda of the title - for an adventure that sees powerful sorceress and tiny shapeshifting lizard The Chameleon doing her very best to re-summon all the master villains whom Po has previously vanquished to the spirit realm... Veteran British actors Ian McShane and Gary Oldman lend their voices to villainous snow leopard Tai Lung and power-hungry peacock Lord Shen respectively.

Released Fri 29 March

Drive-Away Dolls

CERT 15 (104 mins)

Starring Margaret Qualley, Geraldine Viswanathan, Beanie Feldstein, Joey Slotnick, CJ Wilson, Colman Domingo
Directed by Ethan Coen

With uninhibited free spirit Jamie bemoaning yet another breakup with a girlfriend, and demure pal Marian seriously needing to loosen up, what better way to make a fresh start than by heading out on an impromptu road trip? But when the pair cross paths with a group of inept criminals, things soon start to go horribly wrong... The first film Ethan Coen has directed without the collaboration of brother Joel (excluding a documentary about Jerry Lee Lewis), Drive-Away Dolls hits cinema screens 17 years after it was first announced as a 'lesbian road movie' entitled Drive-Away Dykes. Apparently, it's the first in a planned lesbian B-movie trilogy from Coen, with second film Honey Don't slated to go into production this very month.

Released Fri 15 March

Ghostbusters: Frozen Empire CERT tbc

Starring Bill Murray, Dan Aykroyd, Paul Rudd, Finn Wolfhard, McKenna Grace, Carrie Coon
Directed by Gil Kenan

A bit like superhero movies, Ghostbusters films just keep on coming - although nowhere near as relentlessly.

This latest addition to the franchise sees the Spengler family return to where it all started - the iconic New York City firehouse - to team up with the original Ghostbusters, who've developed a top-secret research lab to take the business of busting ghosts to the next level. But when the discovery of an ancient artefact unleashes an evil force, Ghostbusters both new and old must join forces to protect their home and save the world from a second Ice Age.

Released Fri 22 March

Immaculate CERT tbc (99 mins)

Starring Sydney Sweeney, Simona Tabasco, Alvaro Morte, Benedetta Porcaroli, Giampiero Judica, Giorgio Colangeli
Directed by Michael Mohan

Given that recent superhero release Madame Web - in which she co-starred with Fifty Shades Of Grey's Dakota Johnson - received a sound spanking from the critics, Sydney Sweeney will be hoping that this Black Narcissus-inspired psychological horror movie puts her otherwise-promising career firmly back on track.

The Euphoria and White Lotus star plays a woman of devout faith who, having taken up a new role in a prestigious convent in the picturesque Italian countryside, finds that the warmth with which she is greeted is soon replaced by a shocking nightmare of seriously epic proportions...

INTERNATIONAL WATERCOLOUR MASTERS

prestigious exhibition returns to the Midlands

The International Watercolour Masters, a 10-day festival featuring visiting artists from around the world, returns to Shropshire’s Lilleshall Hall in May. The event has been organised and hosted since 2018 by local watercolour master David Poxon, who here explains what visitors to this year’s show can expect to see...

David Poxon’s work in watercolour has taken him around the world.

Since 2018, he has also been gathering expert painters to Shropshire, his home county, on a regular basis for the International Watercolour Masters (IWM) event, which he hosts.

The idea for the Lilleshall Hall-located get-together was born in a Shanghai hotel bar, following David’s attendance at a prestigious art show.

“I was having a couple of drinks,” he explains, “and one of the big watercolour stars from Argentina - his name is Alvaro Castagnet - asked me what my plans were for the following year.” David was already planning to exhibit his own work at Weston Park, near Telford. “I told him all about it, and the venue, and he said ‘That sounds great - but with me in it, it would be fantastic! He’s not shy!’”

Before he had left the bar, David’s initially modest exhibition had grown even further, as more watercolour masters showed an interest in joining him. “I left Shanghai thinking ‘What have I done? I’ve invited all these people to be in a show - so I’d better organise it!’”

Fortunately, in a previous incarnation, David worked in the music industry, a fact which meant he had the necessary skills to plan a large-scale event. The show was an incredible success, with nearly 17,000 visitors in a single month. “It was a prototype. It became obvious to me that I had a great format, but I needed a much bigger venue, and I needed to expand it.”

In his hunt for a more spacious location, David discovered Lilleshall Hall, again situated in the countryside around his home. “Lilleshall is the UK’s national sports & conference centre, so Britain’s elite athletes are always wandering around the place. I thought, now it can be the home of the world’s elite watercolour painters as well!”

“When you walk in the hall, there’s this beautiful atmosphere, with ambient light, a nice bit of jazzy music, and everybody starts floating around. There’s nothing like it in the world - and it’s coming here!”

Watercolour became known as ‘the English style’ of painting thanks to the 17th and 18th-century artists who developed it - including Midlandsers David Cox and Walter Langley.

“They used to go on what is now known as The Grand Tour. They would get a sleeping bag and a bag of equipment, and wander all over Europe - Italy, Switzerland - gathering information and subjects to bring back to their studios to paint. Just like when we go somewhere, we might take photographs, they would do quick sketches.”

Watercolour has since become one of the most popular painting disciplines in the world. “It’s the easiest to start, but the hardest to master. It’s like dealing with a wild animal - you never can quite tame it.”

The artists featured in the show have certainly mastered the craft, however. “The tonal depth, the definition, skill and detail, emotion, drama - there’s everything in these paintings.”

While painting might appear to be a solitary activity, IWM 2024 is very much a group effort. David compares it to playing in a football team: “No one in the team is more important than the team itself. That’s the kind of philosophy that I try to have with this show.”

The event has gained a reputation around the world for its organisation, venue, and top-class presentation, as well as the unique presence of the artists themselves. Multiple live demonstrations are scheduled each day, with attendees able to watch a master at work. “There’ll be a sit-down audience, and each side of the stage will have giant monitor screens which capture what the artists are doing. The audience will be able to follow every brush stroke - and they will be amazed. Last time, you could hear a pin drop. People were sitting there with their mouths open in complete awe at what they were seeing.”

There are also workshops with different artists: “So if anyone wants to spend some real quality time under a master’s tuition, they can book in on the IWM website.”

As well as the activities taking place on site, the event will find an audience much further afield - in a bid to reach fans of watercolour who can’t attend the event in person, the 10-day festival is being filmed. “This is the equivalent of Glastonbury - but for watercolour!”

There will be interviews with artists, a tour of the exhibition, and plenty more besides. “I’ve made a little series called Watercolour Basics - five-minute modules, without any jargon, aimed at people who want to get started painting.”

IWM tickets should be bought in advance - there’s a limited capacity, in the interest of audience comfort - and all of the 150-plus paintings are for sale.

In addition to IWM events, Lilleshall Hall’s cafe, restaurant and Italian Gardens will be open as well. “It’s not just for people who may be interested in painting - we want everybody to come along. This is something completely different, and the atmosphere is very therapeutic.”

Alongside paintings from global masters, IWM also hosts a watercolour competition, which this year brought in nearly 3,000 entries from people all around the world.

“People say ‘It’s not the winning that’s important, it’s the taking part,’ but actually, winning is nice! When you do win something, and you get the acceptance of your peers, it gives you a good boost, and it enthruses you to do more.”

Judging the competition was no mean feat. David collected 20 masters and four industry professionals to judge the entries remotely.

“The amazing thing was, when all the results were in, the same 10 people had got the most votes from all these judges. You could see the pattern. These are judges from China to North America, to Brazil, to Europe, and they were all voting independently.”

In addition, the top 200 entries will be given their moment in the spotlight, broadcast on a giant screen in the main exhibition arena.

David has been blown away by the skill exhibited by his fellow masters. “The artists in the show have taken it to a new dimension. The watercolour paintings at IWM 2024 are all museum quality.”

The International Watercolour Masters 2024 offers visitors the chance to enjoy fantastic artwork, insightful workshops and fascinating demonstrations in a beautiful setting. Whether you’re an established or aspiring artist, a fan of watercolour, or just somebody who wants to see true artistic skill in practice, this is definitely an event not to be missed.

International Watercolour Masters 2024 runs at Lilleshall Hall, Shropshire, TF10 9AT, from Wednesday 15 to Friday 24 May. The exhibition is open daily from 10am - 4pm and admission is by advanced ticket only. Prices cost £10 each and group discounts are available. For more information, and to purchase tickets, visit: IWM2024.com

Drawing Attention: Emerging Artists In Dialogue

Wolverhampton Art Gallery, until Mon 6 May

This thought-provoking British Museum touring exhibition features art produced by some of the most promising up-and-coming names in the field of contemporary drawing.

Their work is displayed alongside art by numerous celebrated creatives, including Mary Delany, Edouard Manet, Barbara Hepworth, Andy Warhol and Yinka Shonibare. The exhibition showcases a wide range of techniques and practices, with artists illustrating the ways in which drawing - often considered a quiet or private medium - can be used to challenge social norms, explore identity and protest injustice.

Tatiana Wolska: Leisure As Resistance

Midlands Arts Centre (MAC), Birmingham, Sat 9 March - Sun 2 June

Resourcefulness ingrained in her during a childhood spent in communist Poland - where recycling became a necessity due to the scarcity of goods - has had a significant impact on Tatiana Wolska's output as an artist.

Tatiana describes herself as a 'junk collector', using her artistic talents to breathe new life into discarded plastic bottles, salvaged timber, rusty nails and foam from old mattresses.

This first solo exhibition in the UK showcases some of her signature recycled bottle sculptures and several new commissions, including scrap-wood sculptures, large-scale drawings, a makeshift hut and a mural. Members of the general public viewing her art will be invited to engage in community activities such as reading groups, knitting clubs, repair cafés and meditation-through-drawing sessions.

Landscape And Imagination: From Gardens To Land Art

Compton Verney, Warwickshire, Thurs 21 March - Sun 16 June

Works by celebrated artists including JMW Turner, Nicolas Poussin and Anya Gallaccio feature in this brand-new exhibition at Compton Verney, a show which explores the question of how art might work together with nature to reverse the decline of the UK's green spaces. An accompanying selection of playful interactive activities in the exhibition galleries will provide families with the opportunity to imagine their own colourful and fantastical landscapes.

Contemporary Pâte de Verre: The Material Of Time

Stourbridge Glass Museum, until Sun 23 June

This unique exhibition of internationally acclaimed Pâte de Verre glass artists is the result of a collaboration between Stourbridge Glass Museum and the Contemporary Pâte de Verre Association. The Association works to support new investigations into Pâte de Verre and what the 5,000-year-old glass technique can do 'in sculpture and new narratives for our rapidly changing world'. The show is based on the same-named 2022 book (The Material Of Time) by Dr Max Stewart and Tone Orvik.

After The End Of History: Contemporary Working-Class Photography 1989 - 2024

Herbert Art Gallery & Museum, Coventry, Fri 29 March - Sunday 16 June

The challenges, beauty and diversity of contemporary working-class life - as depicted by working-class artists using the medium of photography - are explored in this fascinating new exhibition, curated by acclaimed photographer, writer & broadcaster Johnny Pitts. A Hayward Gallery Touring show, the collection features work from 1989 onwards in order to mark the 35th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall (which happened on 9 November of that year) and the symbolic end of Communism.

Victorian Radicals

Birmingham Museum & Art Gallery, until Thurs 31 October

Birmingham's impressive collection of Pre-Raphaelite art is here being displayed in the city for the first time in more than five years. Taking the subtitle 'From The Pre-Raphaelites To The Arts & Crafts Movement', Victorian Radicals features vibrant paintings and exquisite drawings presented alongside jewellery, glass, textiles and metalwork. The show provides visitors with the chance to discover the story of the Pre-Raphaelites - Britain's first modern art movement - and learn about their influence on artists and makers well into the 20th century.

BUGG'S LIFE

Singer-songwriter Jake Bugg is returning to the region to play headline and support-act shows ahead of the release of a much-anticipated sixth album. What's On caught up with him to find out about the new record, live gigs and supporting rock royalty...

If you want a reminder of how quick time flies, how about this: precocious singer-songwriter Jake Bugg, who performed at Glastonbury at the age of 17 and had a number one album the following year, has just turned 30. In the interim, he's released four more albums, toured the world, supported the Rolling Stones and even recorded the soundtrack to a documentary about football superstar Ronaldinho. It's been a whirlwind 13 years for the boy from a Nottingham council estate, a background that keeps him grounded as well as amiably matter-of-fact during our chat.

It's been a while since your last album, Saturday Night, Sunday Morning, and the Ronaldinho soundtrack. How are things coming with the next one?

I did the soundtrack, and I've been writing ever since then, really. I was in the studio all of last year and the record's pretty much there - we'll be playing a few new songs from it on the upcoming tour. I'm really happy to have a new record pretty much ready to go, although it's always a funny one - you're excited about it but you're worried at the same time.

Tell us a bit about how the album has come together.

I've been working with these guys at Metrophonic, and they've been great and done the whole record, really - it's been a great experience. It's just picking up a guitar and jamming around and seeing what comes out - it might be a riff, it might be a few chords or a melody - and just going from there.

I didn't do too much sitting at home on the acoustic with the laptop because I spent two years doing that for the soundtrack during Covid, so I wanted to get into the studio.

And play with other people?

Yeah, exactly. I love playing and writing on my own, but it's good to go and work with other people. You learn new things, and you come up with stuff you probably would never have done on your own.

What can fans expect from the new album? Saturday Night Sunday Morning took you in a poppier direction - does the new one continue in that vein?

I'd say this one has gone back the other way - it's a lot more gritty, more energetic, more uptempo... definitely more on the rock side than pop side this time, which I think is a good place for me. Obviously there'll be some traditional kind of Jake Bugg things in there as well. I like to think the fans will be quite happy with this one; it seems a bit more like something I would do. I really like the songs, and I just hope other people can relate to them like I can - that's always the interesting part.

The Your Town shows are set to feature two sets - one solo acoustic and one with a full band. How do you choose which songs appear in which section? Is the new material best suited to a full band, to make it more palatable to audiences hearing it for the first time, or do you like the idea of leading people in with an acoustic rendition?

With these shows the acoustic section of it is more of a nod back to how I grew up playing. I used to play shows just me and my guitar, kinda half an hour every now and then, so we're playing some older songs from that period. I think when you're playing brand-new songs, you want them to have the biggest impact they can have, so I do them with a band. There's obviously a few songs on this new record that are slower - not every song's uptempo with a full band - so maybe there's an argument to sneak a new ballad one into the acoustic set. So that's an option, too.

So audiences will get a few brand-new songs and, by the sounds of it, a few very old ones?

Yeah, pretty much. We'll give people a flavour of everything, really. It's nice to mix it up and do stuff we haven't done for a while - and stuff that we've never played before as well.

And at venues you've not played before, since many aren't on the traditional touring map...

Yeah, it's something we realised last year when we were playing festivals and going to places we wouldn't usually go. The reception and appreciation from the audience was fantastic, so we thought why don't we go to some of these places on the tour, as we hadn't really done some of them before.

There's a gap in the middle of the tour when you'll be opening shows for Liam Gallagher and John Squire. Does that mean you knew about their unexpected partnership before everyone else?

Oddly enough, I didn't! It was by some miracle that the dates worked out in between mine. It's a pure coincidence but one I'm quite happy with. To go out on the road with those guys will just be a great experience. I love my guitar, so getting to see John play each night will be a great inspiration.

You weren't even born when the Stone Roses were in their pomp, but it sounds like you're a fan?

Absolutely. I actually supported the Roses when they did their comeback around the 2012 Olympics and played a small show in the Village Underground in East London. It was great to support them - but more than that, I got to watch them in a 500-capacity venue, which was amazing. They were really on it that night.

Playing on the same stage as such a legendary act and then having a number-one album all at the age of 18 was obviously an amazing experience, but you've said before that you suffered a lot from insecurity and imposter syndrome. Have you got a bit more relaxed about that as you've got older?

I'm a bit more relaxed in general, I think. It's always a funny one when you see your mates doing the graft and going to work while you're getting to travel to all these lovely places and just play shows every night...

...with Liam Gallagher...

Yeah, exactly! A lot of our mates grew up listening to Liam, so it does feel quite surreal. But yeah, it's fine - you've just got to get on with it. The music keeps me sane!

Jake Bugg plays headline shows at Keele University, Staffordshire, on Friday 8 March and Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, on Sunday 28 April. He supports Liam Gallagher and John Squire at Civic Hall at the Halls, Wolverhampton, on Thursday 14 March.

BANGED UP!

There's plenty to see and do at Birmingham's West Midlands Police Museum

West Midlands Police Museum offers a unique day out in the heart of Birmingham. From visitors with an interest in local history, to budding detectives (of all ages) and fans of the macabre, the venue has something to suit all tastes. Intrigued to find out more, we took a visit to The Lock Up to check out ‘life on both sides of the bars’...

Birmingham’s West Midlands Police Museum is an unassuming red brick building, situated on the city’s Steelhouse Lane and only five minutes walk from Snow Hill Station. The popular visitor attraction will soon celebrate its second birthday, after opening its doors in April 2022.

The building was a fully functional ‘Lock Up’ from 1891 until 2016 - a place to hold people after they had been arrested. In most cases, prisoners would spend less than 24 hours in the building before being sent to trial in the courts next door. Intriguingly, this journey was made through a tunnel between the two buildings, which can still be seen in the museum’s basement.

Visitors spend a moment behind bars in the entrance ‘lock up’ and check in at the erstwhile charge desk - now a reception desk - before making their way to the main prison block. Unlike the blue Police Box on display from Coventry - which is a hit with visiting Doctor Who fans - the museum really does seem bigger on the inside.

Metal grille balconies give access to the cells on each floor. From any point in the main building, it’s possible to see all the way down to the basement and up to the glass roof. This is actually a 130-year-old security feature, allowing police officers to see and hear trouble arising - even two floors away.

Unsurprisingly, the open feeling doesn’t extend to the cells. Many lack windows, and in their original form were lit only by a candle in a recess high up the wall. On busy nights, multiple prisoners could occupy one cell - an unsettling thought for those free to wander in and out of cells as they please.

When safer prison conditions were implemented in the early 21st century, four cells were kept in their existing condition - honouring the building’s Grade II listed status and providing a glimpse of its former life. Each cell now hosts an exhibit, covering anything from early police bicycles, to corporal punishment, and stories of people who were detained there.

The museum is run by a tight-knit team of staff and a large bank of volunteers, which includes serving and retired police officers. It’s supported by both the Heritage Fund and West Midlands Police and promises ‘a unique perspective of life on both sides of the bars’.

Real care has been taken to maintain this balance, and the staff do everything they can to ensure that visitors have a grand day out.

Engagement Officer Archie creates bespoke programmes for visiting schools and the museum boasts a huge amount of educational material, designated space for sessions, and an enthusiastic team to deliver them. School visits can even include sleepovers, where pupils bunk down in cells.

There is a forensic trail in the basement, where visitors solve a crime by collecting clues, fingerprints and plaster casts of footprints. On occasion, crime scenes feature Camilla - a full-size mannequin donated (and named) by the hospital next door.

As well as catering for younger visitors, the museum also offers popular murder-mystery nights, giving would-be detectives the chance to catch a murderer by interviewing suspects dotted around the cells. There’s also a host of after-hours talks, events and activities to suit visitors with darker tastes.

Fans of true crime can hear ‘stories of murder and mayhem’ and see some of the more ghoulish items in the museum’s collection at a bespoke event called The Macabre Museum on Sunday 14 April. Not for the faint-hearted and limited to visitors over 18 years old, the event provides an opportunity to see the most notorious items in the venue’s archives.

There are also regular after-dark ghost-hunting tours of the building, which feature spooky stories of strange sightings and mysteries from around the West Midlands and the Lock Up itself.

Talks by visiting West Midlands Police officers and experts in related history complete the programme. Previous talks have included deep dives into the history of the real Peaky Blinders - a moniker that was never used by the police. The talk was hosted by well-known local historian Professor Carl Chinn, who has a family connection to one of the gang members.

In addition to events and activities, the museum houses an impressive archive of records and artefacts, including some of the country’s first prisoner ‘mug shots’, dating back to the mid-19th century. Photography was a luxury commodity at the time, and the collection’s photos are often the only remaining images of these people. Members of the public investigating their family history occasionally approach the museum to check these records, and the staff are happy to oblige - although searching through them is no mean feat.

Some of the archive’s items, ledgers, photographs and historic uniforms are on permanent display. To see more of the collection, visitors can book a behind-the-scenes tour. These are generally scheduled during Birmingham Heritage Week in September.

Each month at the museum is themed to celebrate a different facet of the police force and its history. In March, the focus is on diversity within the police, while April marks the 50th anniversary of the West Midlands Police forming. The museum will be celebrating the occasion throughout the month, and the build-up to the anniversary is already in full swing - check out the website and social media for updates.

Although currently a gem hidden in plain sight, word is spreading about this fascinating building and the stories locked within. Tickets to visit cost £10 for adults and £6 for under-16s (with other concessions available).

West Midlands Police Museum offers an interactive journey into local history while celebrating revolutionary officers of the last 130 years. It’s also perfect for those with an interest in the techniques and technology the police have used to crack down on crime. And for anyone keen to see a life-size police horse, solve a murder, or dive into the past, the museum is a real treat.

West Midlands Police Museum at The Lock Up on Steelhouse Lane is open Wednesday to Sunday, and during the school holidays. Visit museum.west-midlands.police.uk for more information.

RETURN OF MILOS

Described by BBC Music Magazine as ‘one of the six best classical guitarists of the last 100 years’, Montenegro-born Milos Karadaglic this month makes a welcome return to Warwick Arts Centre, where he’ll be joined by the Arcangelo Chamber Orchestra to present a programme of Baroque classics...

Is your most recent album, Baroque, a bit of a reset for you, Milos?

I tend not to look at things in this way, because I always see music as one thing. I have changed through the years, and so has the world around me. I feel that it has never been more important to really be true to yourself. That’s the only way that we, as artists, are going to be able to survive and stay relevant in a world that is constantly changing around us. So in many ways, yes, it’s a bit of a reset if you want to look at it like that; but for me, it’s just a natural return to the core values of who I am as a musician.

There are some interesting choices within Baroque - can you tell us a bit more about the selection process?

Baroque is the treasure trove of the pieces that I have loved over the years; pieces that have been played by so many of my heroes and colleagues, and works that I have enjoyed as a listener. I wanted to see how I could tackle the subject of Baroque music from that perspective; not looking at it from the perspective of the classical guitar, where the view on Baroque is limited to just a handful of composers. It was a big process to make the selection because some pieces work and some pieces don’t work for the guitar. But the one thing that makes them all come together is the variety of styles and influences. Each piece on the album is a little bit like a Baroque pearl. Each one is slightly different, and each one has its own beauty. And yet, at the same time, all together as an album they make just one perfect whole. I have very rarely enjoyed the process of making an album as much as I have this one - working with Jonathan Cohen and Arcangelo and arranging the works together with Michael Lewin. I feel really proud of this one.

Many of the pieces were written for other instruments. Did that present challenges in terms of translating them to guitar? And if so, how did you get over them?

There were many challenges. There were pieces that I would work on until the very end, and then I would realise that a phrase wouldn’t work simply because of the limitations of the guitar compared to the keyboard, or the fact that I don’t have a bow like you have on the violin or on the cello. Whenever you are dealing with transcriptions, it’s so important to know that the main moral guide in any transcription should be that you should only be doing it if it adds another layer of expression, another layer of quality and another idea to what is already there from the composer. The moment it becomes a compromise, an ego trip, rather than something that serves the music and the purpose of why it’s done, I’ve always been very conscious of that throughout my career. It only makes sense if it stays true to the message.

Which are your favourite tracks on the album?

It was tremendous fun to play the Vivaldi concerto movements that were written for four solo violins. But also, all my life I’ve been drawn to pieces that are lyrical and that wake up your inner heartstring: pieces like the Rameau, Handel and Couperin. Finding a way to make the guitar sing, and finding a way to make the string become a voice, is what always gives me the most pleasure - and that is always what I love sharing the most with my audience in concert. Rameau’s The Arts And The Hours and Handel’s Menuet are two such pieces on the album.

What are your plans for the year ahead?

I’m touring Baroque in the UK, America, and in the summer at festivals. And at the same time, I’m very much thinking about the next album and the next cycle. That’s never easy, because so much consideration and thought goes into that. It’s a process that always lasts for many months before that journey becomes clear. Right now, I’m in the middle of exactly that.

You’ve played Warwick Arts Centre before. Any memories of previous appearances there?

Yes, of course. How could I forget?! Coventry was a huge open-air festival organised by the BBC, and that’s always really special because you get to play in front of a very wide audience. That’s something I love doing very much because guitar is that perfect instrument that bridges the gap between classical and mainstream. It really is always very special. I have been to Warwick Arts Centre numerous times with orchestras and solo, and every time I played there, there was something I remembered. I also love coming here as I have close friends that live nearby, and seeing them every time makes it feel very, very memorable.

Milos Karadaglic performs at Warwick Arts Centre, Coventry, on Saturday 9 March.
